- c. The title does not contain abbreviations or formulas.
- d. At the bottom of the title, the author's name (without title) is written, along with the name of the institution, and e-mail correspondence (first author).

2. Abstract and Keywords

- a. Written in Indonesian and English, consisting of 1 paragraph with a maximum word count of 250 words.
- b. The English abstract is written in the order of Background, Methods, Results, Conclusion, and Keywords.
- c. The background contains the main research problem in a concise manner, ending with the research objectives.
- d. Methods contain research methods/designs, research instruments, data collection techniques, data analysis methods, and research procedures in a concise manner (if possible).
- e. For literature reviews, methods can be omitted.
- f. Results contain both quantitative (mean, standard deviation, p-value, OR/RR/RP, or other statistical values) and qualitative results.
- g. Conclusion is the answer to the research question (without writing the statistical value again).
- h. Keywords contain the main words consisting of 3-5 words.

3. Introduction

The introduction section is written as a whole without subtitles in the form of paragraphs with a length of 15-20% of the entire length of the article. This section contains:

- a. Background or urgency of the title,
- b. Review of previous literature/research/case reports
- c. Benefits, and formulation of research objectives or writing literature review
- d. Theoretical foundation (brief literature review).
- e. Contains hypotheses and novelty / differences with previous research.

4. Method

The methods section is 15-20% of the overall length of the article. This section contains:

- a. Research design (research type and design).
- b. Research instruments.
- c. Data collection techniques, data sources, variables, and operational definitions.
- d. Data analysis techniques/statistical tests.
- e. Summarized research procedures (if possible).
- f. For literature review, the method section can be removed.

5. Result and Discussions

Results and discussion are presented at 60-70% of the overall length of the article. This section contains:

- a. For quantitative research, this section describes the results of the data analysis that includes statistical values, such as mean, standard deviation, p-value, OR/RR/RP, or other statistical values, along with the interpretation of these values.

- b. The statistical values described must be in accordance with the statistical test specified in the method.
- c. For qualitative research, this section describes the results of interviews/focus group discussions, along with their interpretation.
- d. For literature review, this section explains the results and comprehensive discussion of the title raised.
- e. Can be presented with tables, graphs, or diagrams and then given a conclusion to clarify the results verbally. Tables and Figures are presented in the center, as shown in the template
- f. This section also contains a discussion that answers the research problem. The discussion contains an explanation of the results, the results of other similar studies, interpreting the findings, integrating the findings of the research into the existing body of knowledge, developing new theories, or modifying existing theories, and the limitations of the research if any.

6. Conclusions

- a. Contains conclusions that contain answers to the objectives/problems of research/literature review writing.
- b. Written without re-loading statistical values.
- c. Written in the form of an essay, not in numerical form
